ECOVADIS

EcoVadis is an organization that evaluates the CSR (Corporate Social Responsibility) performance of companies, i.e. the way in which companies have integrated CSR principles into their activities and their impacts.

The score (0-100) reflects the quality of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) management at the time of the evaluation. It is based on four criteria: environment, social and human rights, ethics and sustainable procurement. More than 75,000 companies in 175 countries have been evaluated to date. The evaluation is customized to the CSR stakes of the company in question according to its size, activity and geographical location. These criteria are based on international CSR standards such as the principles of the UNGC, the ISO 26000 and the conventions of the International Labour Organization (ILO).
